Nero Marquina

DESCRIPTION

Bearing the presence of antiquity, the Ritual Tray has the characteristic diagonal veining of Nero Marquina marble, a fossiliferous marble quarried in the Basque Country of Spain and replete with small fossilized corals and sea creatures dating from the stone's origins in the Jurassic period.

Cut from a single block of stone, this decorative platter or tray for collecting or display juxtaposes the quiet symmetry of classical proportion with primal white veining on deep black.

CARE

Clean with a soft, damp cloth and mild soap, avoiding abrasive or acidic cleansers (including lemon or vinegar), ammonia, or bleach. Wipe dry.

Although each piece has been sealed to preserve and enhance the natural stone, no stone is entirely stain proof. Wipe away substances like wine or coffee promptly, before they can be absorbed.
